they develop their voice and their opinions," says Bansal. Jha adds that there is a healthy balance of academics and extracurricular activities, but adds that there is scope for improvement. "I think we could really increase the amount of sports that we have in our college. Right now, sports is not really a focus area," she says. With new initiatives on the campus, Mirandians are encouraged to work on a number of projects apart from their syllabus. "The students and teachers are such a close-knit community here, and the amount of effort the faculty puts in to improve us is amazing," says Jha. ■

(permanent and ad hoc) caters to 2,630 students. With great emphasis on the holistic development of students, apart from academics, the college has numerous student societies focused on various areas of interest, such as drama, debating, music, books, sports and literature. Students are also encouraged to work on creating social entrepreneurship models and solving real issues on the ground. No wonder students say a lot of the learning happens outside the classroom—doing projects in the real world.

Recently, a group of students worked with Thathera craftsmen of Amritsar to help market their products. Thathera is a dying art of making traditional copper and brass utensils. Designers were brought on board and the products

GURUSPEAK

SIMRIT KAUR
Principal, SRCC

What sets SRCC apart?

We try to understand the gaps in our curriculum. We have added value data programmes. We are also working towards beginning courses in artificial intelligence and blockchain technology. We might introduce a language course as well.

SRCC hosts national and international conferences. Some of the recent events held were on global risk, sustainability and inclusiveness. For industry, we have discussed digital disruptive technologies.

We adopt a very good methodology towards the holistic development of students. We have over 30 students' societies—large ones by student bodies—developing the applied skills of students.

We also have a sanitation park. Today, my students know how much waste they are generating.

We offer students 24/7 counselling—both for their career and psychological well-being. We maintain full confidentiality.

What defines a student from SRCC?

Typically, SRCC students have a very high IQ. They are very adaptable—most of our students are from south India, so there is a culture shock. Our students are very aspirational, so the frustration levels are high if their aspirations are not fulfilled.

...um from a consulting firm—the best placement offer to a student of Delhi University pursuing an undergraduate programme. The college has enviable infrastructure, including a massive sports complex and a library with 24-hour check-in/ check-out. Another unique feature is the sanitation system. SRCC's waste management system is top-notch. The idea behind it is to encourage students to think of sustainable solutions for India. Students say there is immense academic pressure to be corporate jobs, which veers many with different career goals into corporate life. Students joining SRCC come with various aspirations—some want to join the civil services, some want to do an MBA while several others want to go into academics. It's this motley mix of backgrounds and aspirations that makes the experience at SRCC more enriching. As principal Simrit Kaur says, the ability to adapt quickly is the key to surviving and thriving in the college. Her advice to students is to focus on what they aim to do and not what they want to become eventually. Because what you do is what you become. ■
